State of the Junious State of

Chief Justice Carol W. Hunstein

Smart reforms in the adult and juvenile justice systems were the highlights of Chief Justice Carol W. Hunstein's final State of the Judiciary address, which she delivered to a joint session of the Georgia General Assembly on February 7, 2013.

Criminal Justice Reform: The Chief Justice praised the work of the Special Council on Criminal Justice Reform, which two years earlier united the three branches of government in an effort to make Georgia safer while saving taxpayer dollars. The council's key achievement was a comprehensive set of new laws that diverted non-violent and low-level offenders into drug and mental health courts and treatment programs rather than prison. Under the initiative, 12 new drug and mental health courts, and substance abuse and mental health treatment centers were created to address the roots of crime and repeat offenses. A new program that helps long-term inmates transition back into mainstream society also addresses recidivism. The reforms have stopped Georgia's prison population growth and reduced the number of inmates in local incarceration centers, and they will save taxpayers $264 million over five years, she noted.

Juvenile Justice Reform: Just as it has reformed the adult criminal justice system, Georgia is poised to enter a new era in how it deals with troubled youth, the Chief Justice said. Imprisoning youthful offenders only exposes them to violence, abuse and more criminality. Nonviolent offenders, minor juvenile offenders and low risk children deserve second chances, she said. and should be offered effective options such as mental health and substance abuse treatment, anger management, family counseling, education and employment guidance, and supervised probation.

The Chief Justice pointed to innovative pilot programs in Ohio and Illinois that divert money spent on incarcerating children into community-based programs that offer rehabilitation, and she urged Georgia's political leaders to consider similar initiatives. Because children cost the state five times more than adults to imprison, Georgia taxpayers stand to realize significant benefits by investing in youth reform rather than incarceration, she said.

The Chief Justice also noted several significant judicial branch projects:

- Judges in two counties leveraged federal funds to create four drug and mental health courts;
- The Administrative Office of the Courts, supported by the Commission on Interpreters, continued a pilot project to provide constitutionally mandated interpreting services to courts in outlying areas;
- The Georgia Commission on Family Violence led by Judge Stephen Kelley, Superior Courts, Brunswick Judicial Circuit, and Judge Peggy Walker, Juvenile Court, Douglas Judicial Circuit developed a comprehensive plan to significantly reduce family violence in Georgia;
- Progress continued on a statewide electronic filing system that is compatible with all courts.

New Legislation

The House of Representatives Chambers

The 2013 Georgia General Assembly celebrated the longawaited passage of a new Juvenile Justice Code that went into effect January 1, 2014. HB 242, the Juvenile Justice Reform Bill, was the culmination of years of reform efforts by the state bar's Young Lawyers Division, the Special Council on Criminal Justice Reform, and JUSTGeorgia, a statewide juvenile justice coalition led by the Barton Child Law and Policy Center, Voices for Georgia's Children and Georgia Appleseed.

The new code will bring sweeping changes to the state's juvenile justice system. For cases involving status offenders, the new laws are aimed at keeping children out of detention centers and providing them with social services that will reduce juvenile recidivism. In delinquency cases, judges will be able to consider the severity of the offenses and the risk of re-offending when sentencing juveniles.

For the Judicial Council, the 2013 legislative session was marked not by big initiatives, but by technical and incremental changes to existing laws. Individual bills of significance included SB 66, which increased the maximum contempt of court penalties in superior and state courts from $500 to $1,000. SB 120 gave probate courts in counties having no state court the statutory authority to request prosecuting attorneys for cases subject to the court's jurisdiction. The magistrate courts saw passage of HB 146, which provides for the issuance of electronic warrants and adds procedural safeguards in the issuance of good behavior bonds.

AOC staff continued to work with judges on projects like misdemeanor traffic reform, contributing to the 2013 House Title 40 Study Committee report. Traffic reform legislation was eventually introduced in the waning days of the session for continued work the next year. Both the House and the Senate passed resolutions honoring the Judicial Council and the Administrative Office of the Courts for forty years of service to the State. The resolutions praised the Judicial Council and the AOC for their forty year commitment to the efficient and fair administration of justice in Georgia's courts. The House of Representatives' resolution was offered by House Speaker David Ralston and Judiciary Chairman Wendell Willard. Senator John Crosby, a popular former judge, as well as Senators Stone, McKoon and Cowsert sponsored the Senate resolution. Formal copies of the resolutions were delivered to Chief Justice Hunstein and AOC Director Marla Moore. The resolutions now hang in the reception area of the AOC offices.

Judicial COUNCIL of Georgia

The 26-member Judicial Council develops policies for improving and administering Georgia courts. The Chief Justice of the Supreme Court serves as chair of the council; membership consists of the presidents and presidents-elect of the judges' councils for each level of court: appellate, superior, state, juvenile, probate, magistrate, and municipal. On July 3, 2012, the Supreme Court amended the membership of the council to include the president-elect of the Council of Municipal Court Judges.

The council oversees the work of the Administrative Office of the Courts (AOC) through established oversight committees: Standing Committee on Policy and Legislation, Committee on Court Reporting Matters, Accountability Court Committee, Judicial Workload Assessment Committee, Domestic Violence Committee, and Records Retention Committee.

In early 2013, members of the Judicial Council, AOC staff, and future Judicial Council members began to develop a strategic plan for FY 2014 through FY 2016. This plan will set long-term goals for the improvement of Georgia's courts, and focus resources to make tangible progress towards those goals. The strategic plan will also facilitate effective communication by the judiciary with the legislature, executive branch, and the public. Working sessions were held in January, April, and June.

The council met four times in FY 2013:

- September 21, 2012 Forsyth. The council approved recommendations for additional judges for the Chattahoochee and Oconee judicial circuits. Standards for accountability courts were approved for: adult drug countability courts were approved for: adult drug countability courts were approved for: adult drug countability courts were approved for:
- proved for: adult drug courts, drug treatment courts, and mental health courts.
- January 10, 2013 –Atlanta. The council voted to support legislative initiatives for the 2013 General Assembly session, revised two rules of the Board of Court Reporting, and heard reports on civil services for domestic violence victims, the immigration and the state courts initiative, and statewide judiciary civil e-filing.
- April 12, 2013 Atlanta. Representative Mary Margaret Oliver (D-Decatur), and Senator Josh McKoon (R-Columbus) were guests of the council and spoke to the budget and revenue issues that continued to be at the forefront of legislative concerns. The council adopted the recommendations of the Special Committee on Court Reporting Fees and Processes regarding the application of an official fee schedule, format and page rate; the taking down and transcribing court proceedings, documentation of evidence, and electronic/digital reporting.

• June 10, 2013 – Atlanta. The council approved standards for adult drug courts, juvenile drug courts, mental health courts, and family dependency treatment courts. It also approved the FY 2014 Adult Drug Court Certification Application and the FY 2014 Mental Health Court Certification Application.

Judicial Council

Administrative Office of the Courts

As a state level court administrative Office of the Courts (AOC) furnishes a wide variety of critical support services to the trial and appellate courts and leads business improvement initiatives as directed by the Judicial Council. The agency is organized into three line divisions: Court Services, Financial Administration, and Information Technology, which work closely with the Director's Office staff professionals.

The Director is responsible to the Judicial Council for the operation and performance of the AOC and supervises staff functions involving budget, communications, governmental and court liaison, human resources, and legal support.

The Director participates on state boards and commissions including the Criminal Justice Coordinating Council, Commission on Family Violence, Institute of Continuing Judicial Education, and the State Bar of Georgia's Next Generation Courts Commission.

On a national level, the Director contributes to the Conference of State Court Administrators (COSCA) by sharing subject matter expertise and collaborating to improve court business processes across the country.

Budget

Budget policy support is provided by an analyst who oversees internal budget activities, monitors expenditures, and reviews and recommends budget, program, and policy proposals for the Judicial Council, AOC, and affiliated agencies. The analyst also evaluates the fiscal impact of potential legislation, projects, and programs.

Communications

The AOC maintains relations with judges, court users, and the public. Newsletters, press releases, social media updates, a directory of court officials and personnel, and an annual report on the courts serve to inform the judiciary and other constituents of newsworthy developments. The communications team is regularly called upon to offer design and photographic services to associated councils, conferences, and groups.

General Counsel

In-house legal counsel provides legal research, advisory, and drafting services for judges, councils, boards, commissions, and court employees. AOC attorneys investigate ethics and other disciplinary complaints against registered court professionals on behalf of their governing organizations and associates with the state Attorney General on matters of mutual concern.

Marla S. Moore, AOC Director

Human Resources

The agency performs and offers assistance with human capital and employee management services, including benefits and salary administration, leave management monitoring, performance reviews, policy management, and professional training designed to enhance employee development. The human resources staff is also responsible for maintaining official personnel records, recruitment, and hiring.

Governmental and Trial Court Liaison

The Governmental and Trial Court Liaison team supports the Judicial Council's Policy and Legislation Committee in executive and legislative branch relations and internal governing initiatives. Additionally, the team furnishes administrative services to trial court judges' councils, training councils, and leadership, and networks to foster cooperation and communication leading to the improvement of the administration of justice, both inside and outside the judicial branch.

In fall of 2012, the Judicial Council and the Council of Probate Court Judges piloted the Judicial Collaborative Service (JCS) to provide a members-only, secure destination for judges to post and edit documents, send messages, and manage projects on-line. The piloted JCS platform proved to be unsuccessful, and a new product is being developed in FY 2014.

In the closing months of FY 2013, the team prepared to accelerate processes relating to Judicial Council policy and legislative development to better communicate and promote judicial branch initiatives to legislators and the Governor.

Court Services Division

Many AOC core functions involving daily contact with judges, clerks, court administrators, and other court system professionals fall under the Court Services Division.

The Office of Accountability Courts and Grants Management supports the Judicial Council Accountability

Court Committee which is charged with executing responsibilities assigned by the Chief Justice and prior criminal justice reform legislation. Initial operational and treatment standards for felony drug and mental health courts were adopted and later revised by the Judicial Council. Standards for other accountability courts (juvenile, family, DUI) were slated for adoption after the end of the fiscal year. (The current Standards for Georgia Accountability Courts can be found at http://bit.ly/1hqHVWm.)

The certification and peer review processes for felony drug and mental health court programs were adopted in June 2013. Applications for certification were released to these courts immediately after the fiscal year.

Minimum performance measures for adult accountability court programs were identified in HB 1176. Using previously submitted data reports and guidance from the National Drug Court Institute, National Center for State Courts, and Vera Institute of Justice, the Judicial Council identified additional performance measures for adult and other programs.

The Judicial Council sponsored the ninth annual Georgia Accountability Courts Conference on May 20-22, 2013. The Atlanta conference's theme was Setting the Standard: Measuring the Work, Marking Our Progress, and Making a Difference. More than 600 attendees, speakers, and support staff participated in more than 50 workshops and presentations.

The Office of Certification and Licensing provides administrative support and registers court professionals for affiliated organizations governing professional qualifications. These professionals include court reporters and court reporting firms, court interpreters for non-English speakers and the hearing impaired, court mediators and neutrals, family violence intervention programs, misdemeanor proba-

Master Jury Lists

During the summer of 2012, Georgia's criminal justice system watched with anticipation as counties began using new jury source lists compiled using a statistical method that greatly increased inclusiveness. The sweeping overhaul of the jury-pool system from county-created jury lists to a master statewide list was the result of groundbreaking legislation sponsored by Rep. Alex Atwood (R-Brunswick) in 2011. The law was enabled by years of study and analysis by the Supreme Court Committee on Jury Composition, led by Justice Hugh Thompson. Working with a consultant, the committee applied sophisticated statistical analysis to millions of public records to ensure that more Georgians are correctly identified on jury lists and are able to exercise their constitutional role as jurors.

From the passage of the legislation until its effective date (July 1, 2012), AOC staff developed rules for creating and using the new master jury lists, while clerks' offices prepared for the enormous, data-intensive task of determining Georgia's jury-eligible population. Once the lists were delivered, local jury and court clerks addressed questions and made the adjustments to accommodate the new system. Prosecutors studied the constitutional ramifications of the lists and successfully defended the constitutionality of several county master jury lists. Feedback on the rollout of the first state and county master lists led to changes in the processing of source lists that improved the accuracy of the 2013 master jury lists.

tion providers, and private process servers. The Office issued registrations and licenses for nearly 5,000 individuals and businesses during the year.

To improve services to these professionals and businesses and permit real time access to their registration processes and records, the AOC initiated development of an online application that decreases processing time from hours to minutes. As a baseline to compare current and future licensing processes and customer service, the AOC surveyed client groups' satisfaction with current registration and renewal procedures. The project will roll out in phases in FY 2014 and 2015.

Court Interpreters

To assist non-English or limited English speakers and deaf or hearing-impaired people using Georgia courts, interpreters must be specially trained as court support professionals to ensure equal access to justice for these individuals.

In FY 2013, the AOC assisted with four interpreter candidate orientation sessions and four written and two oral exams. Fifteen new interpreters in three languages (Spanish, Portuguese, and Vietnamese) were certified or conditionally approved. There are 149 certified and conditionally approved interpreters in Amharic, Bosnian, Cantonese, Farsi, Haitian-Creole, Japanese, Korean, Mandarin, Polish, Portuguese, Spanish, and Vietnamese. In addition, there are eight sign language interpreting firms currently certified to operate in Georgia.

On behalf of the Supreme Court Commission on Interpreters, an early assessment of language access needs and programs was undertaken to inform development of a state language access plan. The commission considered whether to require court interpreters to fulfill continuing education requirements. Funded through an appropriation by the General Assembly, a Remote Interpreting Pilot Project was initiated in two courts to evaluate the feasibility of providing long-distance, video court interpretation services in areas with limited access to interpreters. The pilot will be completed in FY 2014.

Court Neutrals

The Georgia Office of Dispute Resolution (GODR) administratively supports the Commission on Dispute Resolution in its oversight of local, court-connected programs offering alternatives to traditional litigation. Those alternatives – mediation, non-binding arbitration, and case evaluation – give litigants lower-cost and more participatory choices for resolving their differences, and they help redirect scarce court resources for adversarial cases.

The state's 2,000 neutrals must receive three hours of continuing education credits each year to maintain registered status. GODR provides year-round training opportunities including a series of online videos and publishes Be Neutral, an online newsletter that presents topical issues and services for registered neutrals.

The December 2012 Alternative Dispute Resolution Institute had a record-breaking 257 participants attending the conference in Atlanta, live broadcasts in Savannah and Tifton, and a subsequent video viewing in Macon.

Court Reporters and Firms
Court reporters are responsible for producing a verbatim record of court proceedings. In Georgia, most court reporters are certified in one of two methods – machine shorthand or closed microphone – with some certified at various skill levels within the method.

Fulton County Court Improvement Task Force

An AOC team concluded its year-long support of a study of superior and state court administration in Fulton County. Composed of court officials, neys, community representatives and local legislators, the Fulton County Court Improvement Task Force released its Final Report and Recommendations on September 28, 2012. The report discussed the critical need for innovation in the courts and outlined several recommendations – customer service, transparency, accountability, budget independence, collaboration, and elimination of redundancies. The report, appendices, list of members, and other information about the task force can be found at:

www.georgiacourts.gov/fulton-taskforce.

During the year, the Judicial Council Court Reporting Matters Committee and the Special Committee on Court Reporting Fees and Processes completed studies of court reporting practices in trial courts to identify potential improvements. The Judicial Council voted to employ technology and process changes that will support efficiencies for courts, county governing authorities, and court reporters.

The Board of Court Reporting of the Judicial Council made significant changes to its rules governing court reporting firms by revising the licensure process, related definitions, and the description of professional services. The Board clarified the prohibition of certain contracts for court reporting services and delineated disclosure and grievance requirements to promulgate firms' professional and ethical conduct.

Family Violence Intervention Programs

There are 106 certified family violence intervention programs operating in 168 locations across the state. These programs, located in 43 judicial circuits and 70 counties, are the only programs certified to teach domestic violence intervention classes. Certified programs must comply with state requirements for victim safety, participant completion and termination, and general liability insurance.

Georgia Commission on Family Violence meeting, March 2013

Additionally, every class must be facilitated by a person who has met the state's education and background requirements.

Misdemeanor Probation Providers In addition to routine activities relating to regulatory compliance, the County and Municipal Probation Advisory Council staff participated in the state Department of Audits and Accounts' performance audit of misdemeanor probation providers. The 89 misdemeanor probation providers registered in Georgia employ an average of 1,400 individuals and manage an average of 320,000 cases.

Private Process Servers
Since 2011, the AOC has been responsible for testing private process servers. During FY 2013, the AOC administered two written examinations on Georgia law and procedures as a condition of eligibility for private process servers to apply for full certification or appointment by designated courts. Of 157 persons applying for the state exam, 143 persons passed. The certification program operates in partnership with county sheriffs and the Georgia Sheriffs' Association (GSA), which is charged with maintaining a registry of all certified process servers.

The Office of Children, Families, and the Courts encompasses several multiagency initiatives targeted at improving court services for vulnerable populations. A goal of the federal- and state-funded Committee on Justice for Children throughout its 17-year span is improved automation and information sharing of deprivation case records. As a result of ongoing development, the Case Processing Reporting System enables 1,500 case managers, child advocates, attorneys, and judges to share child abuse and neglect information. In February 2013, the state Department of Education began sharing education data for more than 4,000 foster children through the system.

An ongoing contract with the Division of Child Support Services (DCSS), Department of Human Services, precipitates coordination between the judicial and executive branches to enhance child support services and collections. Through the contract, the AOC administratively supports the Georgia Child Support Commission in its work to review and engage stakeholders in modifications to child support guidelines. During the year, twentythree trainings were conducted for judges, attorneys, law office staff, and domestic violence advocates in 22 locations around the state. Specific attention on pro se litigants and mediators targeted calculation of child support using the approved form.

Training for judges and attorneys focused on the law and how to use the electronic calculator tool.

By the end of FY 2013, 89 counties had electronically filed child support establishment orders and other documents between DCSS offices and superior courts.

Judicial Council/AOC Strategic Plan

In late 2012, AOC Director Marla S. Moore asked the Judicial Council leadership to join the AOC in developing a strategic plan to guide the council and AOC during the period FY 2014 to FY 2016. A consultant led working sessions in January, April, and June 2013 while interviewing multiple stakeholders. As a result of those meetings and interviews, the Judicial Council Strategic Planning Committee drafted a mission statement, goals and guiding principles for the strategic plan:

Mission

The Judicial Council and AOC lead collaboration on policy across Georgia's courts to improve the administration of justice in Georgia.

Vision

To improve justice in all Georgia courts through collaboration, innovation, and information.

Guiding Principles

- •Uphold the independence and integrity of the judiciary.
- Promote efficient and effective administration of justice.
- Support informed, fact-based decisions that affect the courts.
- •Collaborate with key stakeholders in judicial, executive, and legislative branches.

Under the strategic plan, the Judicial Council and the AOC would serve three key functions: as collaborative forums for all classes of courts; as leaders in statewide judicial policy formulation; and as Georgia's premier judicial information resources. Strategic objectives were identified as: improving collaboration and planning; building thought leadership; and improving citizen experience with the courts.

The Chief Justice and AOC Director were tasked with three responsibilities: directing the implementation of the plan; engaging Judicial Council members for input and participation; and reporting to the Judicial Council on the progress of outcomes.

The Strategic Planning Committee members are: Presiding Judge Sara Doyle, Court of Appeals of Georgia (chair); Judge Mary Staley, Council of Superior Court Judges; Judge Charles Wynne, Council of State Court Judges; Judge J. Lane Bearden, Council of Juvenile Court Judges; Judge Chase Daughtrey, Council of Probate Court Judges; Judge W. Allen Wigington, Council of Magistrate Court Judges; and Judge E.R. Lanier, Council of Municipal Court Judges.

The plan can be viewed at http://bit.ly/1daihDC.

In December 2012, the Commission on Family Violence published the Georgia State Plan for Ending Family Violence, a statewide plan to end family violence in coordination with over twenty-eight governmental and non-profit entities. The plan outlines goals, objectives, and initiatives to prevent domestic violence, increase access to safety and support resources, improve community connections and support for at-risk families, enhance interventions with abusive people, and improve system response effectiveness.

Financial Administration Division

The Financial Administration Division assists 29 separate judicial branch programs with tasks including budget preparation and management, payroll administration and audit compliance, and invoicing and accounts payable. It also handles budget inquiries from the Governor and General Assembly on behalf of each Judicial Council budget unit.

Throughout the summer and fall of 2012, the division team assisted the Court of Appeals in converting its fiscal operations to Team Works, the statewide accounting system.

Weekly meetings between representatives of the AOC, Supreme Court, Court of Appeals, and the State Accounting Office yielded beneficial inter-agency cooperation. All items related to the Court of Appeals system migration were identified, and the team developed a plan that provided for a smooth transition to the Team Works system.

Information Technology Division

The Information Technology Division develops and supports court automation projects including the Georgia Automated Judicial Exchange (child support e-filing application), the AOC's court information and customer portal, several case management and docketing systems for participating courts, and EXPRESS for e-citation solutions. Internally, staff manages desktop software and equipment, the agency's computer network, e-mail, websites, and listservs.

Division staff actively participates in local and national groups such as Organization for the Advancement of Structured Information Standards (OASIS), Consortium of Court IT

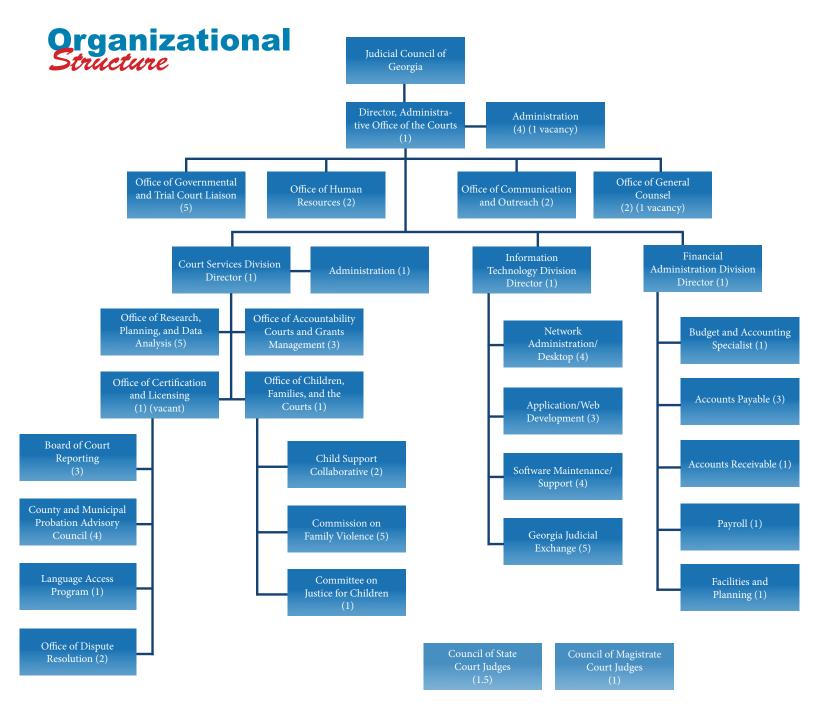

Officers (CITOC), Joint Technology Committee (JTC), and Legal XML to define, design, and promote judicial technology standards.

On July 1, 2012, courts -- primarily municipal courts, but some probate and juvenile courts -- using the Traffic Information Processing System (TIPS) received the first transmissions of citations electronically generated by the Georgia State Patrol (GSP). In June 2012, the GSP began automatically uploading its citations to the AOC. The AOC worked with third party vendors to bridge the gap between the citation data delivered through its platform to non-TIPS courts.

Statewide Judiciary Civil E-Filing Steering Committee

In June 2012, the Supreme Court established the Statewide Judiciary Civil E-Filing Steering Committee to lead development and implementation of a system that allows court documents to be filed electronically in all classes of court. Throughout FY 2013, AOC staff worked closely with the committee to draft legislation for implementing statewide civil E-filing. While the project did not receive funding during the 2013 session of the General Assembly, the Judicial Council will continue to seek funding during the 2014 session.

Statewide Master Jury Lists Disseminated

The first statewide master jury lists were distributed to Georgia counties through the new Georgia Jury Management Software System (GAJury). GAJury automatically compiles a list of residents eligible for jury service in a given county from the statewide master list, ensuring that inclusive and representative jury lists are drawn. Douglas County became the first county to successfully draw a list of potential jurors using GAJury. The county list was used to seat a jury for an August capital trial.

Judicial Council Membership Increased

The Supreme Court amended the membership of the Judicial Council to include the president-elect of the Council of Municipal Court Judges, raising the number of members to 26.

Educational Summit for Court-Involved Children

The Supreme Court Committee on Justice for Children and the Troup County Juvenile Court hosted a two-day summit in LaGrange entitled "Conditioned for Success: Improving Educational Outcomes for Court- and Agency-Involved Children."

Blackwell Joins Supreme Court

Judge Keith Blackwell was sworn in as an associate justice of the Supreme Court by Gov. Nathan Deal. His appointment filled the vacancy created by the retirement of Chief Justice George H. Carley on July 17, 2012. Justice Blackwell had served on the Court of Appeals since November 10, 2010.

Georgia Team Attends National Language Access Conference

Georgia was among 49 states, three territories, and the District of Columbia that sent teams to Houston, Texas, to discuss and learn about language access issues in the courts, October 1-3, 2012. Georgia's team members were Justice Harold D. Melton, Supreme Court; Judge Melodie Clayton, State Court of Cobb County; Ms. Marla S. Moore, AOC Director; Ms. Linda Smith, Program Manager, Language Access Programs; and Mr. Antonio DelCampo, Esq., Commission on Interpreters.

Justice Melton said of the summit, "We realized at the conference that we all shared common struggles to reach common goals of providing quality language access to the justice system. More importantly, by sharing our struggles, we were able to come away with both a practical vision and practical steps toward seeing that vision fulfilled."

OCTOBER

Remote Interpreting Pilot Launches

The AOC launched its Remote Interpreting Pilot Project. The pilot, funded by a $45,439 appropriation from the General Assembly, connects certified interpreters to remote courts via computer, video and audio feeds. Selected interpreters provide interpretation for litigants with limited English proficiency from the AOC office in Atlanta to courts in the Augusta and Southwestern judicial circuits.

National Symposium on Language Access

The National Symposium on Language Access in Houston, Texas, brought together national leaders in language access to train state teams on issues such as language access plans, remote interpreting, developing resources, training, and technology considerations. Georgia sent a team of five to the symposium where work began on a statewide plan.

DECEMBER

40th Biennial Institute for Georgia Legislators

AOC representatives attended the 40th Biennial Institute for Georgia Legislators where they spoke about the judiciary with members of the General Assembly and legislative staff, state officials, and leaders of other organizations.

The Judicial Council met in Atlanta in conjunction with the mid-year meeting of the State Bar of Georgia. Members discussed legislative initiatives for the 2013 General Assembly session and revised rules for the Board of Court Reporting.

Judge Carla Wong McMillian

Judge McMillian Joins Court of Appeals

Judge Carla Wong McMillian, State Court, Fayette County, was sworn in to the Court of Appeals by Gov. Nathan Deal. Judge McMillian is the first Asian-American to serve on either of Georgia's appellate courts.

CourTools Training

The National Center for State Courts (NCSC) and the AOC hosted a three-day training session on Court Performance Standards: CourTools, a performance measurement method that allows courts to track their success in meeting customer expectations. Thirty AOC staff and nine trial court administrators participated in the training, with six becoming certified to teach the course.

Jury Composition Rule Issued

The Supreme Court issued a temporary jury composition rule to allow refinements to statewide data used to compile county jury lists through the GAJury system. New county master lists were to be delivered in late June 2013.

European-American Prison Project

Three judges were part of a Georgia contingent that spent a week in Europe visiting correctional facilities and exchanging ideas and strategies with officials and policy makers. Chief Judge Brenda S. Weaver, Superior Courts, Appalachian Judicial Circuit; Judge David Emerson, Superior Court, Douglas Judicial Circuit; and Judge Stephen Goss, Superior Court, Dougherty Judicial Circuit, toured two prison facilities in Germany and two in the Netherlands to experience how European justice systems deal with criminal behavior.

Georgia Bar, Media and Judiciary Conference

The AOC again co-sponsored the 2013 Georgia Bar, Media and Judiciary Conference was held February 23 in Atlanta. The theme of the 22nd annual conference was "Georgia Judges, Journalists, Lawyers and the First Amendment: A Primer on Friending the Digital Revolution." The conference included a panel discussion on the state's criminal justice reform efforts that included speakers Chief Justice Carol Hunstein and Court of Appeals Judge Mike Boggs.

AOC Director Receives Prestigious Award

The National Center for State Courts (NCSC) awarded AOC Director Marla S. Moore its 2012 Distinguished Service Award. The award, one of NCSC's highest, is presented annually to those who have made significant contributions to the justice system and who have supported the NCSC's mission.

NCSC President Mary McQueen presented the award to Ms. Moore on June 14, 2013, in Atlanta. Ms. McQueen recognized Ms. Moore's mission to ensure equal judicial access for vulnerable populations in Georgia and nationally. The NCSC Board of Directors selected Ms. Moore because of her demonstrated ability to bring people together toward a common goal. The board cited Ms. Moore's work with language access and jury reform, as well as her introduction of performance measures and transparency at the AOC.

Chief Justice Carol W. Hunstein said of Ms. Moore, "Since taking the reins of the AOC, Marla has made it clear that the agency represents every class of court in this state."

Since 1976, the Administrative Office of the Courts has collected caseload data from Georgia Courts to inform policy and decision-making. Recommendations to the General Assembly for new superior court judgeships are determined from circuit caseload and Judicial Council methodology.

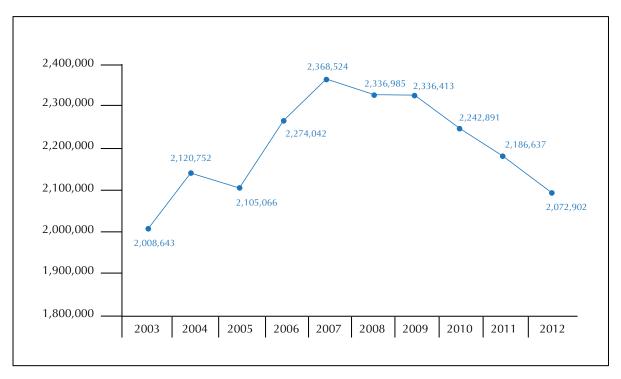

Since 2003, Georgia's trial court caseload has held steady at close to 2 million cases. Caseload for superior, state, juvenile, probate, and magistrate courts peaked in 2007 at 2,368,524; in 2012 caseload dropped to 2,072,902 nearing its 2003 total of 2,008,643.

Supreme Court

The Supreme Court of Georgia, the state's highest court, is composed of a Chief Justice, a Presiding Justice, and five Justices. The court's primary function is to review decisions made in a lower trial or appellate court. The Supreme Court has exclusive jurisdiction over election contests and questions of elections or constitutionality of laws and has general appellate jurisdiction over cases involving title to land; equity; wills; habeas corpus; extraordinary remedies; divorce and alimony; and cases in which a sentence of death was or could be imposed.

Cases are assigned to one of the seven justices for preparation of opinions. The draft opinion is circulated to all other justices for study; after discussion en banc the opinion is adopted or rejected by vote of the justices.

Court of Appeals

The Court of Appeals, made up of twelve judges, has constitutional jurisdiction over appeals from superior, state, and juvenile courts in all cases where exclusive jurisdiction is not reserved to the Supreme Court of Georgia.

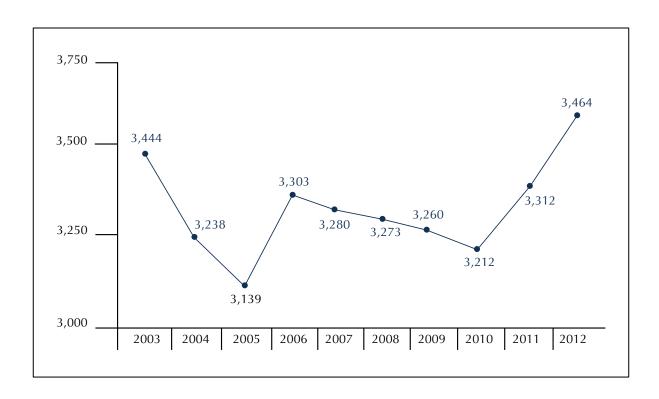

Each case appealed to the court is heard by a panel of three judges. The Chief Judge of the court appoints a Presiding Judge and assigns two other judges to each panel. If a judge of a panel dissents, the case is assigned to a larger panel for decision.

Superior Courts

The 159 superior courts are general jurisdiction trial courts exercising both civil and criminal jurisdiction. Superior court judges hear all felony cases, domestic relations cases, equity cases and other civil matters. Superior courts have jurisdiction to hear appeals from lower courts as provided by the Georgia Constitution including appeals of judgments from the probate and magistrate courts that are handled as de novo appeals.

The superior courts are organized into 49 judicial circuits made up of one or more counties. Judicial circuits and new superior court judgeships are established by act of the General Assembly.

Superior court judges are constitutional officers who are elected to four-year terms in circuit-wide nonpartisan elections. Senior superior court judges may hear cases as assigned in any circuit.

State Courts

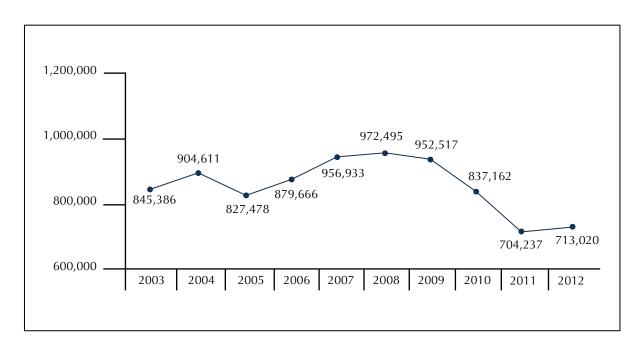

State courts are county courts that exercise limited jurisdiction. State court judges have criminal jurisdiction over misdemeanor offenses, felony preliminary hearings, traffic violations, application and issuance of search and arrest warrants. Civil matters not reserved exclusively to the superior courts are also adjudicated in state courts. Appeals of judgments from the magistrate courts may be sent to the state court and handled as a de novo appeal.

The General Assembly creates state courts by local legislation establishing the number of judges and their status as full-time or part-time. State court judges are elected to four-year terms in countywide, nonpartisan elections.

Juvenile Courts

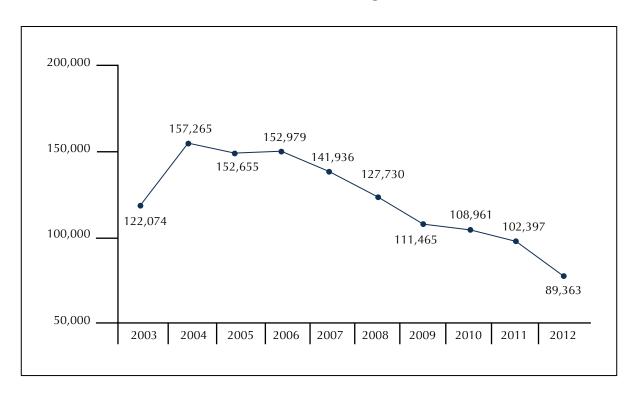

Jurisdiction of the juvenile courts extends to delinquent and unruly children under 17 years of age and deprived and neglected children under 18 years of age. Juvenile court judges have jurisdiction over minors who commit traffic violations, request consent to marry, or enlist in the armed forces. Juvenile courts have concurrent jurisdiction with superior courts in child custody and child support cases and in proceedings to terminate parental rights. Certain serious violent felonies committed by juveniles may be tried in superior court.

In 48 of the state's 49 judicial circuits, juvenile court judges are appointed to four-year terms by the circuit's superior court judges. The Floyd Judicial Circuit elects its juvenile court judge to a four-year term.

Probate Courts

County probate courts exercise exclusive, original jurisdiction in the probate of wills, administration of estates, appointment of guardians, and involuntary hospitalization of incapacitated adults and other individuals.

Probate court judges are constitutional officers who are elected to four-year terms. All probate court judges administer oaths of office and issue marriage licenses. In some counties probate judges may hold habeas corpus hearings or preside over criminal preliminary hearings. Unless a jury trial is requested, a probate court judge may also hear certain misdemeanors, traffic cases, and violations of state game and fish laws in counties where there is no state court.

In counties with a population of 90,000 or greater, the probate judge must be an attorney meeting the qualifications of a superior court judge. In those counties, jurisdiction is expanded or enhanced to include the right to a jury trial, with appeals directly to the Court of Appeals or Supreme Court.

When authorized by local statute, probate judges serve as election supervisors and make appointments to certain local public offices.

In 35 counties, the probate judge also serves as the chief magistrate or a magistrate. As warranted, counties have the option to merge the probate and magistrate courts through local legislation.

Magistrate Courts

Magistrate court jurisdiction includes: civil claims of $15,000 or less; certain minor criminal offenses; distress warrants and dispossessory writs; county ordinance violations; deposit account fraud (bad checks); preliminary hearings; and summonses, arrest, and search warrants. A chief magistrate, who may be assisted by one or more magistrates, presides over each of Georgia's 159 magistrate courts.

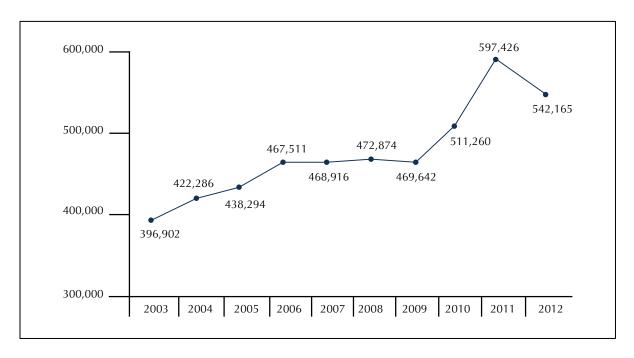

Most chief magistrates are elected in partisan, countywide elections to four-year terms. In some counties, the chief magistrate is appointed by the superior court judges. Terms for other magistrate judges run concurrently with that of the chief magistrate.

In 30 counties, the chief magistrate also serves as the judge of the probate court. As warranted, counties have the option to merge the probate and magistrate courts through local legislation.
